DETAILED ACTION

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 1-3, 9-11, 16-23 and 28-31 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Falardeau et al, European Patent 0,201,411 or Kolich et al, U. S. Patent Publication 2002/0061983 in view of Neuberg et al, U. S. Patent 4,151,223.

Claims are rejected for reasons of record. Both references to Falardeau et al and Kolich et al teach the blending of flame-retardant amounts of anionically polymerized brominated polystyrene into polyesters wherein the polymers possess the degree of bromination as claimed. Reference to Neuberg et al specifically teaches the use of polyester compositions with flame-retardant polystyrene for use in the formation of fibers or filaments, for the formation of textiles. Applicants have argued that the references are improper to combine since they refer to different polymers and that motivation to combine the references is lacking except by using improper hindsight from applicants' invention. These arguments have been considered but are not persuasive. The difference in the degree of polymerization is recognized in the references themselves as seen in Falardeau et al on page 2, and does not indicate a lack of similarity between the applications taught in each of the references. All the references teach the combination of the brominated polystyrene to thermoplastic polymers as an additive for flame retardancy. The argument that references to Falardeau et al and

Art Unit: 1713

Kolich et al do not specifically teach fibers or filaments is not persuasive since, if they did, the rejection would have been anticipation. Each of the references does teach incorporation of the anionically polymerized brominated polystyrene into polyesters or nylons which are routinely made into fibers or filaments and are the same polymers taught in Neuberg et al. The motivation for the combination, therefore, comes from the references themselves and not from hindsight. The claims are, therefore, properly rejected under 35 USC 103 as obvious from the combined teachings of the references.

3. THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.

4. This application contains claims 4-8, 12-15, 24-27 and 32-76 drawn to an invention nonelected with traverse in a response filed 17 April 2006. A complete reply to the final rejection must include cancellation of nonelected claims or other appropriate action (37 CFR 1.144) See MPEP § 821.01.
